Recognizing Teachers in Our Midst

Have you ever thought about how teachers at all levels of teaching affect our lives, even long after we are out of school? Need a doctor? A plumber? Lawyer? A vet? Insurance agent? Carpenter? All of them had to learn at least their basic skills of math, reading, science at some point in their before entering their careers. Advanced knowledge was taught at advanced levels. At all levels some kind of teacher was involved.

To that end, with the start of school this month, we wanted to feature teachers living among us. On pages 4 and 5, six teachers have shared their teaching experiences. There are probably more teachers in Whispering Hills, but we had no way of finding you. (Another reason for getting to know people living around you.) If you would like to share your teaching experiences, send an email to:

Be Wary of Solicitor Activity

Submitted by Mike Gorman, VIP Coordinator

A couple of weeks ago in Whispering Hills and College Park in Richardson, two solicitors with no identification, but carrying iPads were canvassing the neighborhood. They have may have been using the iPads to establish creditability with the homeowners that they approached. When residents were shown the iPads, there was some type of message showing reference to something from Oncor.

Once the solicitors got the resident to believing they were legit, they started to explain that they were selling solar panels with the supposedly consent of Oncor.

The Richardson VIP coordinator, reported that a couple of residents even bought the panels without researching the companies or the panels they were selling. Richardson Police had stopped a similar group and the name of the company that they represented was fake.

The final point is the recent news reports about fires in Plano or Allen from defective or cheaply built solar panels. Also, no one should ever buy anything or even open the door for unknown solicitors.

Don't Feed the Wildlife--It's Rat Season

Several people in the area have reported issues with rats. A way to deter them is to use fox urine which can be gotten at Lowes, WalMart, etc.

Leaving food out with intention of feeding wildlife or strays, invites coyotes, bobcats, raccoons, mice, rats, and other animals that we do not want to encourage to live among us. Much of our food is not healthy for them anyway. Garbage dropped by sanitation workers, should also be picked up. See if you and your neighbors can find nests around you.

Our area is already dealing with coyote issues. Fox sightings have also been reported. While it can be exciting to see wild animals, they can also be a danger if one does not know how to deal with their presence.

Some Common Sense Tips for Secure Mobile Shopping

From Norton Security Online to protect from Hackers

- Always download mobile banking apps straight from your bank's website or from official app stores.
- If the financial site or payment app offers two-or multi-factor authentication, do it. Your account will be less likely to get compromised.
- Don't allow your mobile device to automatically connect to public Wi-Fi networks. Your payment information could get intercepted by hackers.
- Regularly log out of financial and shopping sites and apps, especially if they have your credit card or other financial data stored.
- Use your credit card instead of a debit card for mobile payment apps. Credit cards typically have better fraud protection.

Our neighborhood is seeing more and more non-resident landlords leasing to people with no desire or ability to take care of the property and to follow established City of Dallas Code requirements. Our neighboring neighborhood (Richland Park Estates) is starting to place yard signs stating "Homes Not STR Hotels." You can purchase signs from txneighborhoodcoalition.com. (STR = Short Term Rental) The signs are $5.

Wall Repair and Painting Project

By the time you read this, the wall repair and painting will most likely be finished, or at least nearly finished. The repaired section was stamped to match the design of the rest of the wall. Weeds and limbs were trimmed back, and the wall power-washed, before painting started. The project will include a section of the wall facing the tracks on the west side.

Kudos to a Conscientious Neighbor

A gentleman in black jogging shorts living on Hornbeam was spotted picking up trash left there by people parking along the street. WHNA would like to thank him for taking the initiative to help keep our neighborhood looking nice.

Thanks to all of our neighbors who take care of their yards and do extra things. You are noticed and appreciated.

Thank you, Teachers, for Sharing Your Experiences!

The comments the teachers made reflect responses to questions relayed to them by Helen Meyer and edited by Sonia Harms.

I grew up in north Dallas but haven't lived here since 2010. My husband and I moved back to Dallas last year from Houston.

I have always wanted to teach and I had amazing mentors along my teaching journey to help and encourage me. Currently, I teach 2nd grade at The Covenant School.

I love the community aspect of teaching at a smaller school. My education degree emphasis is children's literature, so I love the reading aspect of my school days.

Being able to individualize the needs of each student in my class while moving along through curriculum can be challenging.

One of the joys of teaching younger students (I have also taught many years in pre-k and kindergarten) is that you get to see them grow throughout elementary school. The seeds of learning you plant throughout a school year aren't always seen while they are still in your class. Being visited by old students is such a joy!

Marybeth Barefield

I was born in Bamberg, in Bavaria, West-Germany. I have lived in Whispering Hills since 1998 and enjoy my friendly and helpful neighbors. I have one son and one grandson.

Until my son was born 26 years ago, I was successfully employed in the Finance and Accounting Business sector. About 21 years ago I was ready for a second career. I used to volunteer at my son's preschool and realized how important and necessary it is to educate and guide young children; they are our future. So I decided to step into education and that's where I will be until my retirement.

I've been employed at RISD for 20 years; for the last 15 I've been at Jess Harben Elementary. I support students with learning disabilities in Kindergarten through sixth grade in Math, Language Art, Science and Social Studies.

Being around children is exciting and fulfilling for me. They are so curious and they come up with the most amazing answers. I encourage students to ask many questions because there is no wrong question in my opinion. It's priceless to see kids learning to solve problems on their own.

About 8 years ago there was a former homeless student in my group. He was starving for knowledge and attention. He was trying so hard to fit in. He always remembered to say thank you. All children don't grow up in a loving home environment. At least during their school day I can show them they are important and I am happy they come to school every day. One day a first grader asked for my phone number because he wanted to be able to call me if he needs help in college.

Gertrud Gillette

I am a native Dallasite. The summer of my 6th grade year, my family moved to Lubbock, Tx, where I remained until I graduated from Texas Tech in 1990. I have lived in Whispering Hills since 2011. My mother and I share our home.

Both of my mother's parents, and several of my great aunts and uncles were teachers. Mom was an amazing example of the love, compassion and dedication it takes to be an excellent teacher. I helped with bulletin boards, sorting & grading papers, and organizing classrooms. I started Texas Tech majoring in Political Science, found that it wasn't for me, and changed my major to education. I realized that I was called to teach and influence children's lives.

This is my 30th year in education! In the course of my career, I've taught 6th grade, 4th grade and have worked as the school librarian. I joined RISD 4 years ago and am currently the LITE (Library Information Technology Educator aka Librarian) at Skyview Elementary. I provide instruction for Pre-K to 6th grade. I love the range of ages that I work with and the variety of instruction I provide. The greatest thing about my job is helping to ignite the spark that will keep kids learning their entire lives.

Mary McWilliams

The most important challenge I face is trying to reach out and connect with those students that struggle in school or have difficulty finding success. I love finding ways to connect with them personally. Sometimes I am able to help them to see themselves differently and that is rewarding. Another challenge is finding the time that I need to collaborate with fellow educators and to plan effective instruction for scholars.

When former students visit me, or find me on social media, it makes my heart soar! I love to hear all that they have accomplished and the triumphs they have in life. When they remember something that I taught them or said, it reminds me of my WHY for being an educator.

Usma Shahi

I grew up and completed a Masters in English Literature in Pakistan. We moved from New York to Dallas 10 years ago and have lived in Whispering Hills 8 years

My family and friends say that I was born to be a teacher. My teachers inspired me so much through their behavior and teaching skills. I am a good listener and an extroverted, friendly person. Teaching gives me the opportunity to enjoy myself.

Currently, I am a Dallas ISD middle school ESL/AVID Excel educator. Understanding the different learning challenges amongst students is a rocky road. Building good relationship with my students help me break the barrier. I strongly believe in "Actions speak louder than words." I don't tell, I show my students, and teach them life skills along with my subject. In the end I often receive individual compliments from students saying, "Ms. Shahi, I am lucky that I have you as my teacher." Those words encourage me to stay in this profession forever.

Brandee Nelson

I was born in McAllen, Texas, but most of my childhood was spent in Lufkin, Texas. High school and college years were spent in Louisiana. I attended Louisiana Christian University in Pineville, LA. During my last year in college my parents moved back to Texas, making their home in Dallas. When I finished my degree 10 years ago, I moved to Dallas to be closer to my parents. Now I reside with them in Whispering Hills.

While in high school, I volunteered to help out with Vacation Bible Study at my church. I knew I wanted to make my profession working with children; I just wasn't sure which area to pursue. I never really thought about teaching as an option

My BA is in Elementary Special Education, and my Masters is in Education, specializing in Dyslexia. I am certified in Elementary Education, Special Education, English Second Language, and Educational Diagnostician. I am also a certified Academic Language Arts Therapist, and a licensed Dyslexia Therapist. I have been teaching for close to 20 years. I have taught special education in a resource classroom, and as a second grade ESL teacher for Dallas Independent School District. I also taught first and second grade for Richardson Independent School District. Currently, I am a Dyslexic Therapist in the Catholic Schools for the Diocese of Dallas.

The Catholic Schools in the Diocese of Dallas use the Take Flight Program from Scottish Rites Hospital to help students with dyslexia. It is a pull-out program that helps children with their phonics, spelling, writing skills, and reading fluency. The students that I teach come from various grades (2nd-8th grade). I travel to three Catholic Schools in West Dallas, working with two small dyslexia groups at each school. I enjoy working with small groups. I find that the more hands-on approach and guidance helps the students gain academically. They love being able to monitor their reading. It gives them a sense of pride and ownership. Seeing them smile or get excited when they recognize their growth brings joy to my heart.

Three years ago, I began working with a young girl in the second grade. When she started the Take Flight Program that first year, she could barely read and spell. There was some growth with her reading and spelling by the end of the year. But, into her second year in the program, her mom, teachers, and I could see growth by leaps and bounds in her reading, spelling, and writing. She enjoyed reading so much that she volunteered to be a reader at the school Mass. It was wonderful to see her stand up in front of all the students, teachers, and parents and listen to her read beautifully!!

Lindsay Nadelman

I grew up in Dallas and have lived in Whispering Hills since 1979.

From the time I was a little girl, I remember lining up my stuffed animals and writing their lessons on my little chalkboard. I have always had a passion for history and an enthusiasm for passing on that information to others

I am currently teaching at the Garland Alternative Education Center. I teach World Geography to ninth graders and Economics and US Government to 12th graders.

I enjoy helping students make the "connection" to what they are learning, and watching the light bulb go on in their heads when they understand something with which they have been struggling.

I also enjoy helping students to understand how our systems have developed throughout history and why some work and some don't.

It is a challenge helping students to understand where to find information. Although computers are great places to find information, students use them more to watch videos and play games rather than focus on the lessons at hand. Teaching students to think critically is a huge challenge. They are so used to just copying what they see and not thinking about why the answers are correct. Students often stay up all night playing games on their computers and on their phones and then use class time to sleep. It makes it hard to keep them engaged in the lesson at hand.

It is always inspiring to help students understand how to come by their information. I once had a student who brazenly sat next to someone daily and cheated off their paper. When I confronted him, he said "Oh I have to cheat because I can't do the work." For the next three weeks I had him sit by my desk and together we went through the assignments and the textbook and where he could find the work. He began making A's daily on the work he was doing and was so proud of himself. It was truly inspirational.
